THAT CALCULATED RISK

FT. WORTH—They play football for keeps down this way. It can't quite obscure the fact that Texas is spouting oil, growing cotton, and raising cattle, but in the fall, King Football rules a large part of the thought of the Southwest.

Over at Austin one of Nebraska's former favorite people, Dana Bible, was moving into November with the hope that the Texas U. team, now coached by Blair Cherry, would erase some earlier disappointments. At Dallas, forty miles away, SMU, although it has important business each week end, was working itself into a fever in the hope of snapping Notre Dame's victory string unless someone sees to that before the two squads meet. It isn't difficult to understand why the Southwest has become one of the nation's grid-iron battlefields. They start in the 'teen age, carry through high school, and polish off as seasoned veterans in college.

Between keeping an eye on the news columns, talking to as many people as will engage in conversation, and listening to a lot of speeches, it has been a busy week. It is so easy to get worn out doing nothing.

The man in the White House had another of those difficult decisions to make. When Mr. Truman, freezing a small portion of the funds devoted to national defense, which congress had voted, it was a case of the judgment of the chief executive and his military advisers against the armchair strategists on Capitol hill. Undoubtedly the president did not take the step he did to limit the strength of the Air Force to 48 groups without talking it over fully with his military aides. It was a decision that the president would not care to make without expert counsel, and a decision which none of us are in any technical position to make. Obviously, in weighing it, the president took a calculated risk. He was saying, in effect, to his people that he and those around him were of the opinion there is no danger of an explosion in the immediate future. If this guess should prove to be wrong, then Mr. Truman, and back of him the people, are in a very unfortunate position.

If national expenditures are to be reduced, there must be a starting point. We know of no place to begin better than at the point calling for the largest outlays of tax money. The bill for national defense in the current fiscal year involves an approximate 13 billion dollars, or more than a third of all the money Uncle Sam will spend. Even more encouraging is the inference to be drawn that world affairs today, seemingly so black at times, so depressing, nevertheless offer no threat of an actual outbreak of hostilities. We believe that American fathers and mothers will be more grateful for that than the immediate tax saving made possible through Mr. Truman's decision.

Few of the newspapers commented upon one of the strange reflections inspired by the untimely death of youthful former Secretary of State Edward Stettinius. Without exception, the death of a man not yet fifty years of age, hailed widely because of his remarkable achievements in big industry, produced a universal expression of regret and recognition of the very punishing labors he accepted in unselfish spirit in serving his country. His activity in important posts in the closing years of the Roosevelt administration do project the amazing political wizardry of the late president. Mr. Roosevelt called upon rich man and poor man to work shoulder to shoulder in the pressing emergencies created by the recent global conflict. With a great deal of skill he was able to draft the services of men connected with big business, used to meeting problems connected with huge organizations, and handling expenditures on a vast scale. There was resentment within the ranks of some of the liberals who became identified with the earlier years of the Roosevelt era, but the late president had his responsibilities, and it can be said that in its essence the New Deal died at that time.

There have always been two views of the efficiency of recognized successful business leaders in the field of government. Mr. Stettinius could not have been subjected to a sterner test than was applied to him. He followed the capable, greatly beloved Cordell Hull to the secretary of state's portfolio. He took over at a time when its responsibilities were greater, if anything, than in the pre-war years. He had a very exacting role in the shaping of the charter for the United Nations, and in a number of important conferences implemented with it. He did a good job.

The country was still in the grip of strikes when this was written, although the sun had broken through the clouds in spots.

The one major agreement reached midweek in the steel industry accentuates a failure of the 81st congress which will receive increasingly nationwide attention. In the matter of social security, we seem to be headed in two directions. There is a clamor for pension systems throughout industry, and at the same time for expanded coverage and for increased benefits under the federal security law. It is oversimplification to say that what is happening is to pile one pension program upon another, but the 81st congress and, better still, its predecessor, besieged with pleas to broaden the provisions of the federal security program, now is able to see where they were blind before—the results of indifference. Yet unanswered, if there is an answer, will be the effect upon the federal security program adopted more than a decade ago, which went into effect at the start of 1937. The setting up of private pension programs may tend to weaken, rather than strengthen, the federal security program.

One of the ace reporters of the New York Herald-Tribune, Bert Andrews, came here to Fort Worth to tell the managing editors a little bit about the undercover currents of the Washington scene. Mr. Andrews is convinced, if no one else is, that Mr. Truman will be a candidate to succeed himself in 1952. He had Mr. Truman's opponent picked out to his own satisfaction—none other than a popular idol, Dwight Eisenhower. If his guess turns out to be good, the country will experience something new in the way of a presidential campaign. General Eisenhower, no longer a military hero, is not orthodox in a partisan sense. It was this lack of political finesse in the politicians' view that applied the effective killing touch to a well organized boom to draft Eisenhower as a candidate in 1948. He simply does not speak the language of the king makers, who seem to feel that one primary qualification of a candidate is the capacity to talk out of both sides of the mouth.

Mr. Andrews told us about a little stay in Lincoln, back in 1917, when he earned a few dollars while on the way up. Now he is covered with honors, well-earned, for a painstaking job of reporting Washington developments for his newspaper. He had a hand in amassing the details which led up to the expose of the five per centers, and he took the managing editors through the weeks of investigation which he and his associate put in until they felt the story was ready to crack.

He supplied a few word portraits of Washington personalities, all in good humor, and fun, including the president, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, and Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews of Omaha. The latter, he said, did not want the job in the beginning, had an eye on a more congenial role, and would not remain in it too long. We thought that Mr. Andrews was not too well acquainted with Mr. Matthews' fighting qualities, known to a good many thousands of Nebraskans. He was plying with questions about the current military controversy in Washington, and although he refused to take any sides in the matter of ousted Chief of Operations Admiral Denfeld, for whom a successor has been named, he did indicate that there was a legitimate gripe in the handling of the case in the way that Admiral Denfeld was removed from the post which he held. He thought a man who had given as many years of his life to the service was entitled to be called in before his transfer was announced publicly.

The new chief of operations, Admiral Forrest Sherman, with a magnificent action record back of him, including aviation, nevertheless starts with a strike against him. Whatever position he takes in the matter of unification of the armed services, he will find that the men under him will charge up against him any deviation from the stand taken by his predecessor.

Here, where aviation has had constant expansion, another air disaster did not produce even the slightest ripple. The average Texan does not need to be convinced that there is no safer place to fly than in a fabulous empire. The Vultee company, which is producing the B-26, the center of present controversy, closed out its Seattle plant and has centered its operations in Fort Worth. On the agenda at this gathering was an inspection trip to Vultee, the hottest potato in Washington in all the present unpleasantness. Those who flocked out to the factory got a look at the giant plane, and some mimeographed material which could be had on any street corner in the United States. At week's end, we head for Houston, which, since the war and since its close, has gained its place in the sun as the second largest shipping port in the United States. It has been a little bit difficult to determine whether Texas or California has a larger vocabulary when it comes to adjectives. It may be simply a matter of the way in which they are spoken.

need of millions," he added. During CROP week committees in counties and localities throughout the state will contribute gifts of corn and other farm products to be distributed through church relief organizations in Europe and Asia. CROP is the first co-ordinated relief collection program of Catholics, Lutherans, and other Protestant churches. It is the largest program of its kind in existence. "The CROP collection will continue through November in many communities where local conditions warrant it," said Dwight Dell, CROP state director. "But our main collection drive will come during Nebraska CROP week." More than 46 counties are already organized and ready to go.

Unity Goal Of 'Big 3' Conferees

U. S. Hopes Ministers Can Achieve Greater European Cooperation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Plans for a Paris meeting of American, British and French foreign ministers stirred U. S. hopes Saturday for greater economic and political unity in Europe.

American officials said the two-day conference might put new life into the movement toward that goal, in view of Secretary of State Acheson's apparent conviction that such unity is urgently needed now.

As a part of this issue, Acheson is prepared to press for inclusion of the new western German state in the European family of nations. He also is ready to discuss outstanding German issues—including the controversial plant dismantling program—in that light.

Acheson will fly to the French capital for the meeting with British Foreign Minister Bevin and French Foreign Minister Schumann. He hoped to be able to leave here Monday night with a small group of advisers and staff assistants. The exact date of the conference will depend on the time of his arrival in Paris.

Sequel to U. S. Talks.

In announcing the conference Friday, the state department described it as a sequel to talks which the three western foreign policy chiefs had in Washington and New York a few weeks ago.

While the announcement did not list a specific program for the Paris meeting, it clearly indicated the nature of the talks.

It did so by linking them to the recent sessions of the Council of Europe and the Organization for European Economic Co-operation (OEEC) in Paris, and by pointing out that (a) the German federal republic is now in operation and (b) defense machinery under the Atlantic pact has been set up and is functioning.

AFL Unit Seeks Enter Cab Case
Taxi cab drivers and chauffeurs local union No. 762, an American Federation of Labor unit, Friday sought to intervene in the Omaha Yellow Cab dispute.

The AFL union asks to be designated as the bargaining agent for all 315 employees of the cab company or that an election be held to determine which union the employees prefer to represent them.

The industrial court has scheduled a hearing for Monday, Nov. 7, on various phases of the controversy between Yellow Cab, Inc., and Transport Workers Union of America, CIO, No. 228.

The court two weeks ago called a halt to a strike which began when the CIO local called its members off the job in September.

2,000 See N. U.'s Mueller Tower Dedicated

Highlight of annual home coming festivities on the University of Nebraska campus Friday evening was the dedication of the $90,000 carillon tower, presented to the university by Ralph Mueller, an alumnus from Cleveland.

More than 2,000 attended the ceremonies at the base of the tower.

The 84-foot shaft of white limestone was described as the first tradition inspiring landmark on the Cornhusker campus since the disappearance of the tower of the old U Hall in the early twenties.

"Great Citizen."
Chancellor R. G. Gustavson, in formally accepting the tower from Mr. Mueller on behalf of the university, lauded the donation as the act of a "great citizen."

Three speakers paid tribute to the spirit and beauty of the tower, and to Mr. Mueller, whose gift of $90,000 to the University of Nebraska Foundation made its construction possible.

Howard S. Wilson, Lincoln, president of the University of Nebraska Foundation, said, "How fortunate we all are to live in a land where men and women are still able to attend an institution of their own choice, to apply the knowledge thus gained, and as fortune smiles upon them, to exercise their generous impulses to make gifts to their alma mater for the benefit of future generations."

"Unique In Purpose."
"This tower, unique in structure and purpose, is such a gift. Coming to this campus in these hectic days of unsettled local and world conditions, it will serve a great mission. Surely, all within hearing will be both soothed and inspired to greater achievement by the majestic tones of its distinctive voice. In the years to come Ralph Mueller Tower is certain to be a treasured possession surrounded by more and more fine campus tradition."

Mr. Mueller, in presenting the tower to Chancellor R. G. Gustavson, said he hoped "that these bells will sing their way deep into the heart of each student during the days on the campus and that in years to follow the memory of these bells will make each student desire to fight and a desire to flee.

"Miss Lane," sighed Sheridan, as he helped Arleta into her car, "must have spent too much time at the bar. She wasn't like this when I was here before."

Nothing could have been more cheerless than the next morning—raining the windows, waves ruffling the lake, trees whipping about in the wind helplessly.

"Allene called it," Cal said, as Martin closed the big door behind him. "Whew, what a day!"

The breakfast room was cheerful, with the new gaily patterned table set with linen runners of Chinese red, the bright yellow pottery, and the artistic arrangement of fruit in a copper platter. Tunia had retrieved from a scrap heap and furnished with salt and vinegar, all a vivid contrast to the storm-lashed world beyond the windows.

"Leta, I like this," Cal said with enthusiasm. "I don't wonder you kept harping on home. I thought it would be like the Lane place, town-house-in-the-country stuff. Not that they haven't a beautiful home, but this is different. It belongs to its background."

Arleta felt new joy surge up. If Cal felt that way she could have both her home and him. And she felt as though she were already married, for she asked none of the questions so close to her lips.

They remained in the breakfast room after the table was cleared and Sheridan talked.

"There's just one solution," decided Cal briskly. "We'll go on with our plans, and after we're married, we'll come out here for a couple of months each year. I'll handle—"

"I'm sorry, Cal," She moved away from him. "I can't marry you until"—she looked out of the window to where the dam lake was covered under the bite of the wind—"the name of that lake has been changed back to Lake Langtry."

"I see, I guess you're right, Leta. So," he smiled, "looks as though Mohammed will have to move to the mountain. I don't see why I can't talk Uncle into letting me open an office for his firm in the city here."

"Cal—"

"Why not? He should have one in this section. I can put in time getting it in running order, train someone to take over when you're ready to leave. I won't be within shouting distance, Leta, but there are telephones, you know."

Never had she loved him so much. "Oh, Cal"—she stood on tiptoe to cup his face in her hand—"you don't know, you can't possibly know what this means to me, to have you near and know you understand."

"Purely selfish, anythingfoot. I could settle to anything, knowing you were out here and not knowing what fresh trouble you had uncovered."

He was thoughtful a moment, then alert. "How about having Martin drive me into the city? I'd like to look over the ground so I can make a convincing report to Uncle. And then is the weather reports are good, I'll go on. I want to get back, and the sooner I leave—"

"And you'll talk to Aunt Leta?"

Lehman Gets Truman Help In NY Race

President Will Speak On Behalf Ex-Governor

WASHINGTON—(INS)—President Truman Saturday throws his oratorical weight behind the candidacy of ex-Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York for the senate seat held by republican John Foster Dulles.

The president, his tongue sharpened by a so-called "non-political" trip to Minnesota, is slated to make a five-minute radio speech in Lehman's behalf during a hour-long democratic party broadcast at 8:30 p. m. (EST).

Mr. Truman is expected to include in his address a vigorous rebuttal of Dulles' "statism" charges against the democratic administration.

White House aides said the president, who returned from his four-day trip Friday night planned no coal strike action for his first work day since Tuesday. They said he will doubtless spend the day polishing the Lehman speech.

Lehman, an all-the-way backer of the president's program, was Franklin D. Roosevelt's successor as governor of New York. Dulles is a republican foreign policy leader who was named by Gov. Dewey to the senate seat relinquished by Sen. Wagner (D-N.Y.)

Chairman Marcus Poteet opposed the lifting of the ban against furnishing such materials to retailers.

"To my mind it knocks out the whole anti-subsidization provision in the law," he commented.

Commissioners Blaine Young of Omaha and Nathan Pont of Stanton approved the change.

They pointed out that the regulation specifically prohibits making of any sale or gift a consideration in connection with the sale of a product. Sales below cost are also prohibited, they assert.

Denver Chief Of Police Is Found Slain

... With Own Revolver

DENVER—(AP)—Denver Police Chief John F. O'Donnell was found shot, apparently with his own service revolver, Saturday in a small washroom off his office. He died 20 minutes later.

O'Donnell's resignation was to have become effective Nov. 15. A custodian, Roger Smith, said he heard a shot and called Detective Richard Brown. They broke down the locked door. O'Donnell, 48, was slumped over a toilet. He was shot through the mouth. His revolver was nearby.

O'Donnell was rushed to Denver General hospital but died as attendants were trying to prepare him for surgery.

O'Donnell submitted his resignation two weeks. Mayor Quigg Newton, who named him chief in 1947, said the chief told him he needed a complete rest. Capt. Herbert Forsyth was named then to replace O'Donnell.

Services Held For Mrs. Nettie Martz, Early Day Teacher

BEATRICE, Neb.—Funeral services for Mrs. Nettie E. Martz, 79, who died Wednesday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Heath Griffiths, were held here Friday afternoon.

Reared on the family homestead near Virginia, Mrs. Martz was graduated from Peru State Teachers college and taught in Johnson and Pawnee counties prior to her marriage. She resided in Seward for many years and later in Beaver Crossing.

Chaplain Tells Of Experiences In Prison Work

Rev. A. H. Ahlman, chaplain of the state penitentiary, told a meeting of Lincoln Lutheran men Friday night of his experiences in working with the prisoners.

Speaking at a dinner meeting in the Y.M.C.A., Rev. Ahlman explained the cultural background of the prisoners. He said that less than ten per cent have come from good Christian homes and have the additional training that a church can give them.

Much of the fault lies in environmental and hereditary background and the lack of cultural training, he said. Most prisoners have not become adjusted at the various emotional levels of childhood, Rev. Ahlman pointed out.

Referring to the administration of state institutions, Rev. Ahlman said, "As far as I can judge, the officials in charge are doing their very best with the materials they have at hand."

He also showed pictures taken in state institutions at which he has worked.

Ten Latvian displaced persons who have settled in Lincoln and vicinity were guests at the dinner. L. A. Lohrborg presided. Fifty-one persons were present.

Chief Carroll Could Take On Directorship

... Wilkinson Suggests

Councilman Rees Wilkinson Saturday offered "the economical solution" to picking a successor to Director of Welfare and Safety Code Verner.

Wilkinson would have Police Chief Joe Carroll:

1. Remain as head of the police department. 2. Assume the responsibilities of the directorship. In this way, Carroll, who now gets $4,800 a year, would get the $5,000 paid the director annually. By consolidation of the posts, the city would save $4,800 a year.

Most-Mentioned. Carroll seems to be the most-mentioned man to succeed Verner, who Friday submitted his resignation, effective Jan. 1.

But should the council cast a favorable eye on the police chief, it is not unlikely that he would turn down the offer. As director he would receive only $200 a year more than he now receives as chief.

Then, too, as chief who has worked up through the ranks, Carroll will be eligible for the police pension. And because the directorship is something of a "political plum," Carroll could find himself out of a job when a future city council is elected.

Shively Possibility. Another possibility for the directorship is Traffic Capt. J. Paul Shively.

With the force since 1923, Shively draws $300 a month as captain. He was in the navy from 1942 to 1946.

The name of August C. Harm might also be considered.

A former commissioner of welfare and safety (1935 to 1937), Harm applied for the directorship when it came time for the council to reappoint the president directors last June. Retired, Harm is a former inspector for the state department of agriculture.

Permit Asked.—The city council was petitioned Saturday by Benjamin W. Martin, 3017 Potter, to allow him a permit for an auto repair shop at that address. The area is zoned residential.

Union Ready Accept If Murray Approves; Ching Moves In On Coal Strike

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A major new break in the steel strike seemed imminent Saturday, while the government stepped in as peacemaker between John L. Lewis and the still-unbroken front of soft coal mine owners.

Republie Steel Corp., the nation's third biggest steelmaker, made its 54,000 workers a pension offer in Cleveland. The CIO United Steelworkers' district director there did not disclose the terms but said:

Awful Approval. "With (CIO President Philip) Murray's approval, we'll accept it."

The No. 2 producer, Bethlehem Steel, settled early this week. Washington officials predicted that if "big steel"—United States Steel Corp., and its subsidiaries—gets into line, the back-to-work march quickly will become nationwide.

One of Pennsylvania's major producers, Lukens Steel Co., reached an agreement with the union at Conowingo early Saturday. Workers began filing back to their jobs. Lukens employees some 5,000 men.

There were stirrings on the coal front, too. Cyrus S. Ching, tireless chief of the federal mediation service, called southern operators here Monday to "explore all the angles" for settlement of the 48-day coalfield shutdown.

Stern Action Hinted. A hint of possibly sterner federal action came from the White House party which returned with President Truman Friday night from his speedmaking trip into the chilly midwest.

Mr. Truman, some associates said privately, soon will make a final decision on whether to go to court, under the Taft-Hartley injunction procedure, to force a resumption of coal-digging. The president himself would not talk about either steel or coal.

Ching said his talk with southern coal operators may last one day or longer. Then he will invite northern owners to Washington for another "exploration," and later other groups.

Implication Clear. He promised to "pursue this thing as long as there is any use." The implication was: after that, it will be up to Mr. Truman.

Ching's strategy was plain. He will bring Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, face to face with the operators only when his explorations have found some toehold for compromise.

Stage Set For Homecoming By Giant Rally

Elaborate Displays At Houses Judged

The University of Nebraska's homecoming weekend was launched Friday night. Thousands of cheering students, fireworks, speeches and a band combined in a giant rally to spark Husker spirit for the football battle with the University of Kansas.

Led by the university's marching band and the traditional victory band, the rally parade marched from the Student Union to the Mueller Carillon tower by way of Sixteenth street, where fraternity and sorority houses displayed elaborate homecoming decorations.

At the rally, at the foot of the tower, Coach Bill Glassford introduced each member of the football squad and gave a short talk. He assured the crowd that the team would make a good showing at the Saturday game.

Queen Candidates. Following the speech, five 1949 homecoming queen candidates were presented by Kathryn Rapp, Waterloo, president of Fassel. The candidates were selected from the membership of the pep organization, and the winner will be presented at the annual Homecoming ball at the coliseum Saturday night.

Candidates are: Shirley Allen, Tecumseh; Susan Allen, Pierce; June Carr, Lincoln. Thousands of Lincolinites crowded the sidewalks in front of the fraternity and sorority houses hours after the rally to view the spectacular and intricate decorations which fronted the houses.

An outstanding display depicted a roof-high devil who lowered an endless line of jayhawks into a Hades, complete with fire, smoke and sound effects. At one house a mechanical spider climbed and descended a huge web with the jayhawks entwined in the net. Others featured models of the state capital and the Mueller Carillon tower.

All in all, more than a score of groups strove to outdo each other in welcoming alumni and threatening the Kansas team.

Judging the house decorations were C. J. Frankforter, Kenneth Walliari and Gail Butt. The winners will be announced at the homecoming dance.

A pep dance at the Student Union followed the rally.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
